

Swansea University
Prifysgol Abertawe

Cronfa - Swansea University Open Access Repository

This is an author produced version of a paper published in:

Cronfa URL for this paper:

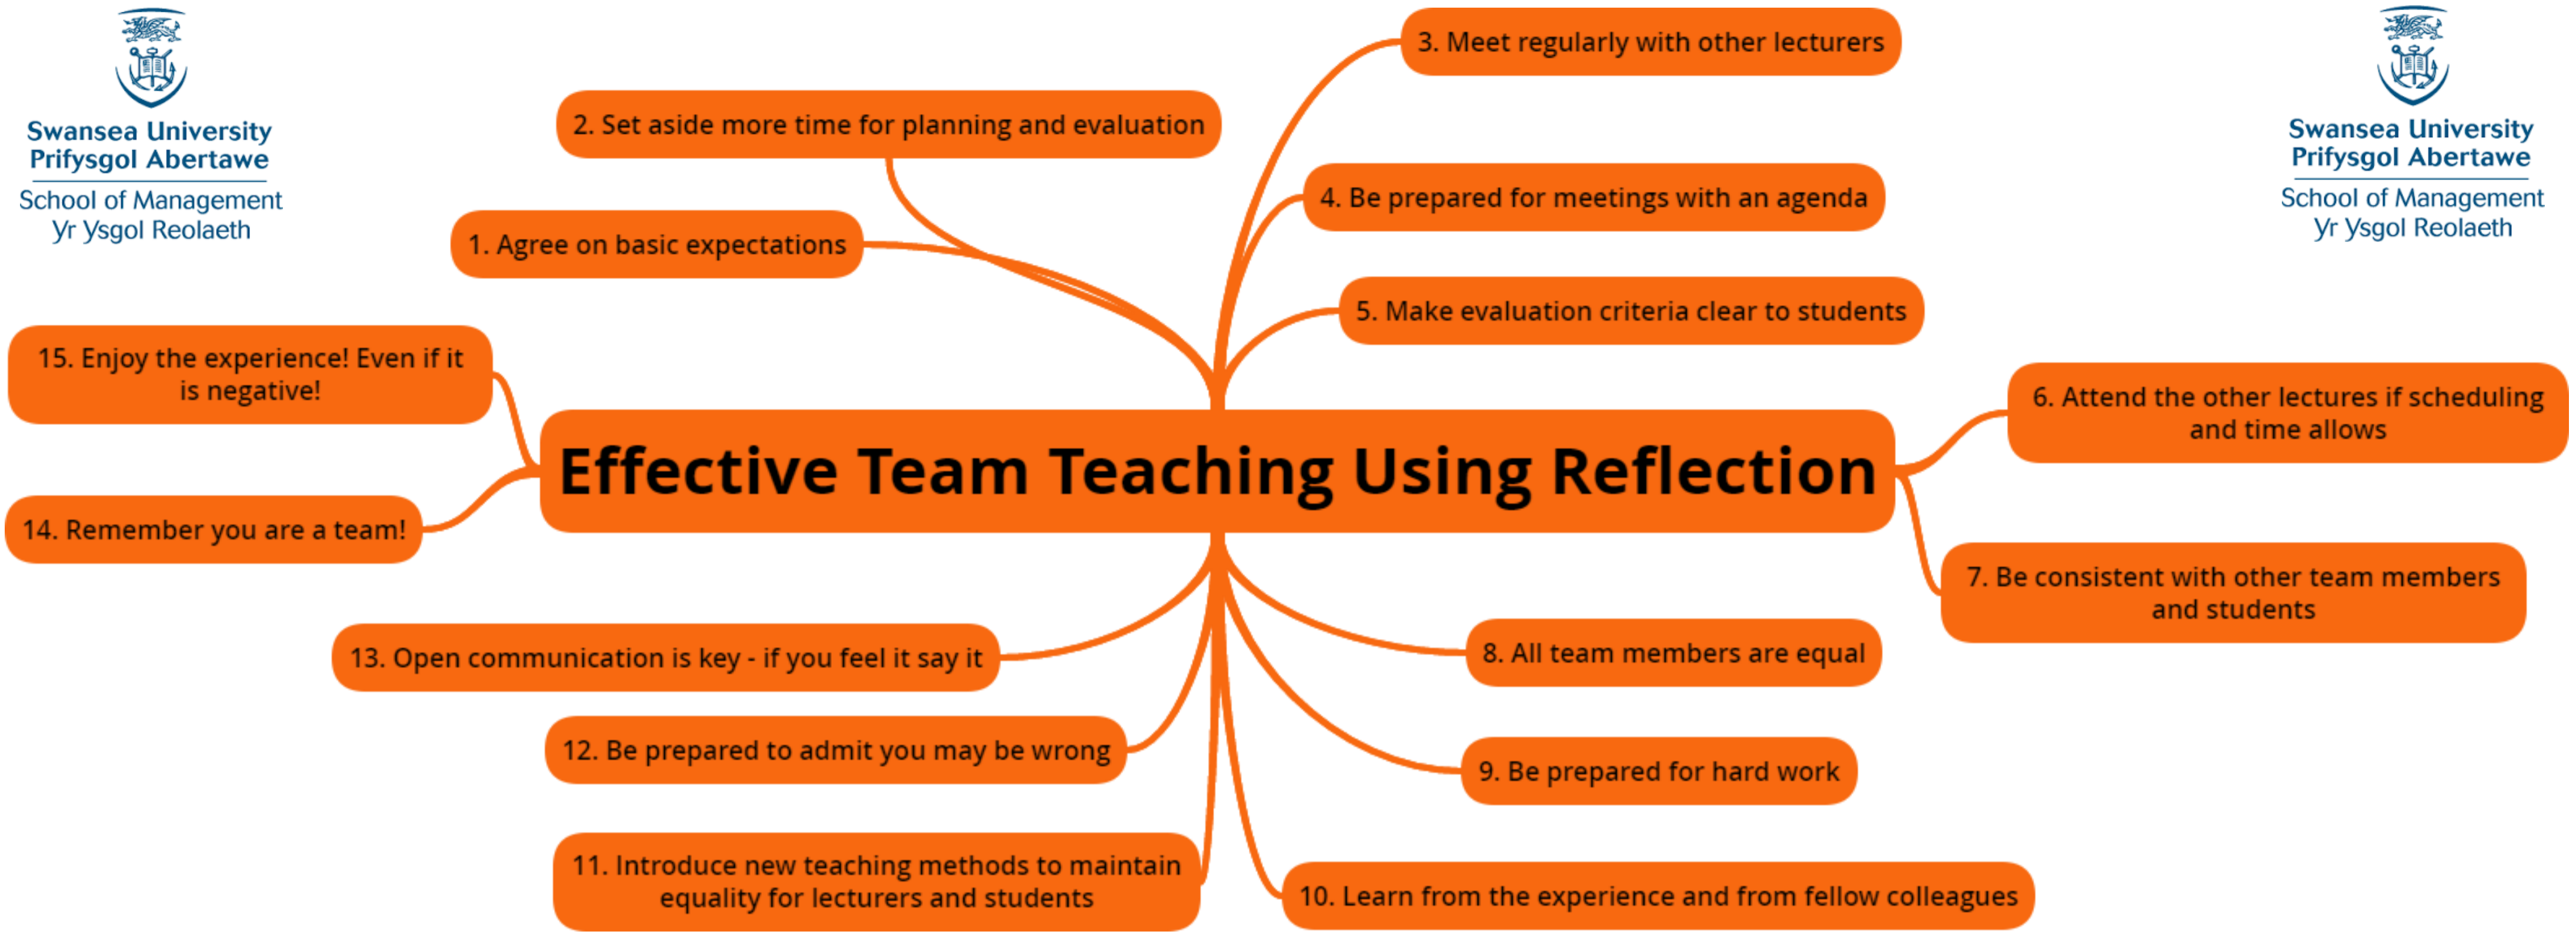

<http://cronfa.swan.ac.uk/Record/cronfa43652>

This item is brought to you by Swansea University. Any person downloading material is agreeing to abide by the terms of the repository licence. Copies of full text items may be used or reproduced in any format or medium, without prior permission for personal research or study, educational or non-commercial purposes only. The copyright for any work remains with the original author unless otherwise specified. The full-text must not be sold in any format or medium without the formal permission of the copyright holder.

Permission for multiple reproductions should be obtained from the original author.

Authors are personally responsible for adhering to copyright and publisher restrictions when uploading content to the repository.

<http://www.swansea.ac.uk/library/researchsupport/ris-support/>

I have had many team teaching experiences and up until my 2015-16 academic year these had been positive experiences. I had worked well with other lecturers and the modules had been successfully delivered.

Most of us will have had a negative team teaching experience that left us asking the following questions:

“Is it me?! Am I doing something wrong?!”

Using literature and reflecting upon my own positive and negative experiences , I developed 15 easy points that can be used in the future to implement successful team teaching.

By Dr Samantha Buxton
Lecturer in Business Analytics at Swansea University School of Management
Deputy Programme Director for MSc Business Management
HEA Fellow